William Harvey House

Regent's Park, London

‘William Harvey house
is a luxurious home
from home in central
London – we loved it.’

William Harvey House (houses 9 and 10, St Andrews Place) was designed and built in 1826 by the architect John Nash (1752–1835). This was a period of distinctive trends not only in British architecture, but also in literature, fashion, politics and culture.

In May 1974 the houses in the precinct of St Andrews Place, occupied by the Royal College of Physicians (RCP), were Grade I listed.

In October 2011 the accommodation at Houses 9 and 10 reopened after major refurbishment. The restoration and decoration were influenced by the historical context, the structure of the building itself and the operational brief. However, the real ambition was to create a welcoming and comfortable 'home from home' in the heart of London.

The accommodation was re-named William Harvey House in memory of the eminent physician.

Eighteen bedrooms have all been refurbished to a 'four-star plus' boutique hotel standard. They consist of:

- > large Parkside rooms
- > spacious standard double or twin rooms on the Albany Street side
- > cosy third floor studio rooms.

Each room is named after an eminent and respected physician. We now offer comfortable and affordable accommodation right in the centre of London, with the added advantage of a beautiful royal park right on the doorstep.

'... a real gem in a beautiful and peaceful location ...'

Parkside rooms
Regent's Park doubles

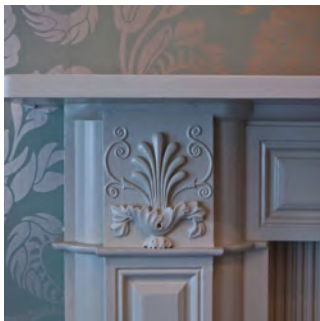

Superior Parkside – Richard Doll

Parkside rooms

Located at the front of the houses, the three large superior Parkside doubles and three standard Parkside doubles all retain much of the original Regency style character and differ only in their shapes and sizes. Most have views of Regent's Park and the RCP gardens.

The three superior Parkside rooms – Cicely Saunders, Sheila Sherlock and Richard Doll – are located on the 1st and 2nd floors and all have large en-suite marble bathrooms, walk-in showers with large rain showerheads and a separate bath.

< The three parkside rooms – Patrick Manson, John Caius and Clifford Allbutt – are located on the ground or lower ground floors. Although slightly smaller than the superior parkside they still retain the same features and sense of luxury. The compact en-suite marble bathrooms consist of walk-in showers with large rain showerheads.

Four of the Parkside rooms can comfortably accommodate families of up to four people. All the rooms feature a writing desk, armchair, flat-screen television, climate controlling units, bespoke furnishings, bath robes and slippers. ■

Standard rooms

Doubles and twins

Standard double – Albertine Winner

Standard rooms

There are six double and two twin rooms, offering a large living space ideal for guests who are staying with us for longer periods of time. These rooms, which retain much of their original character, feature a writing desk, armchair, flat-screen television, climate-controlling units and bespoke furnishings. >

‘... 5-star excellence, we look forward to our return ...’

< The twin rooms are situated on the first floor of William Harvey House overlooking Albany Street, and offer light and airy accommodation with two single beds. The well-appointed en-suite marble bathrooms are finished with stylish chrome fittings and amenities. ■

Standard twin – Thomas Wharton

Studio rooms

Double and single

Studio rooms

Perfect for the single traveller; these rooms, which are mostly situated on the third floor, retain much of their original character and are decorated in the Regency style.

Each room has a writing desk, armchair, flat-screen television, climate-controlling units and bespoke furnishings. The private bathrooms (not en-suite) are finished with stylish chrome fittings and amenities. ■

Baillie room
For meetings and events

Baillie Room

Restored at the end of 2011, the Baillie Room is a magnificent reception room housed within this elegant Grade I Regency building. Overlooking Regent's Park and the cobblestones of St Andrews Place, the room is ideal for receptions of up to 20 guests, boardroom meetings and private dining for 10–12 people. ■

‘One of the most superb rooms we have ever experienced ...’
