

Acute care toolkit 16

Acute medical care for people with a learning disability April 2022

Contributors and consultation for development of this toolkit

- Dr Nadia Awan, consultant learning disability psychiatrist, Salford Royal NHS Foundation Trust
- Rebecca Chester MBE, consultant nurse for people with learning disabilities, Berkshire Healthcare NHS Foundation Trust; chair, UK Learning Disability Consultant Nurse Network; clinical adviser for development of the advanced practice credential in learning disabilities and autism – Health Education England
- Dr Tim Devanney, national learning disability programme manager, Health Education England; shared with:
 - experts by experience
- Dr Adnan Gebril, consultant in acute medicine, Salford Royal NHS Foundation Trust; shared with:
 - senior and junior clinicians at Salford Royal
- Dr Kirsten Lamb, retired GP, chair of RCGP Learning Disabilities Group; shared with:
 - RCGP Learning Disabilities Group – circulated to members for comments
 - Dr Charlotte Annesley, consultant geriatrician and trust lead for learning disability, North Middlesex Hospital
 - Louise Jenkins, strategic liaison nurse for secondary and tertiary care, Hertfordshire County Council learning disability nursing service

-
- Dr Caroline Lebus, consultant in acute medicine, Cambridge University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust
 - Dr Chris Subbe, consultant acute physician; lead for quality improvement, Society for Acute Medicine; shared with:
 - Kim Scandariato, matron for learning disabilities health liaison, Betsi Cadwaladr University Health Board (BCUHB)
 - Dr Jessica York, learning disability psychiatrist, BCUHB
 - Dr Alison Tavaré, GP and co-lead, West of England Learning Disability Collaborative; West of England AHSN and NHS England South West regional clinical lead, NHS@Home; shared with:
 - Dr Sam Browning, GP learning disabilities lead, Leeds CCG and parent carer of a young man with Down's syndrome
 - Jane Woodruff and Geoff Barrett, parent carers of a young woman with severe learning disabilities
 - Andrew Bright, expert by experience; head of development and service quality director, Thera Trust, with experts by experience
 - Dr Immo Weichert, consultant acute physician, East Suffolk and North Essex NHS Foundation Trust, and expert by experience