

Application for the role of RCP regional adviser

RCP regional advisers are a crucial part of the RCP structure. They are the link between physicians in regions, the RCP Council and senior officers. To be eligible, applicants must be current subscribing RCP fellows (rather than fellows of another royal college).

The role requires engagement with local physicians and carrying out specific duties that maintain the quality of local services and encourage a vibrant network of physicians. This involves supporting college tutors and associate college tutors, approving consultant job descriptions, reviewing fellowship nominations, and working with the RCP regional team to create a programme of events including 'Update in medicine' conferences, visits to local hospitals, and meetings with regional representatives.
